

Weekly Market Update

Equity markets continued their rebound as the major U.S. stock indexes recorded their strongest weekly gains of 2024. The S&P 500 gained nearly 4% on the week as positive inflation and growth data reinvigorated hopes of a soft landing. As earnings season nears an end, the estimated earnings growth rate stands at 10.9%, slightly below estimates a few weeks ago but well above the expected 8.9% growth entering earnings season. Large-cap companies continued their market leadership, outperforming mid and small-cap. Growth stocks led the gains last week, significantly outpacing their value counterparts, as the information technology and consumer discretionary sectors outperformed. Amidst the heightened volatility, gold futures continued to set record highs for the third week in a row, now up over 20% for the year. Indices outside the U.S. also experienced similar positive momentum but narrowly lagged domestic equities.

Bond yields moved lower last week on the benign inflation print. The 10-year Treasury ended the week slightly lower at 3.89%, while the 2-year remained at 4.06%. Long-duration bonds outperformed short-duration across the board, with long-duration corporates being the best-performing segment. High-yield bonds continue to do well as they traded higher on what appeared to be light volumes. Investment grade corporate bond yields and high yield ended the week lower at 4.98% and 7.70%, respectively.

Economic data was mostly positive for the week, reigniting hopes for a soft landing. The NFIB Small-Business Optimism Index rose to 93.7, the highest reading since February 2022, but still remains well below the 50-year average. The Producer Price Index came in below estimates, rising 0.1%, which was a positive sign for the fight against inflation. The Consumer Price Index came in line with expectations, at 0.2% for July, but showed key signs of ongoing disinflation, especially in goods. Manufacturing data from two regional gauges showed that manufacturing sentiment weakened - the Philly Fed manufacturing index slipped to a reading of negative seven in August from 13.9, marking the first negative reading since January. U.S. retail sales posted its biggest gain in a year and a half, surging by 1%, as most of the gains came from a rebound in automobile sales. The University of Michigan's consumer sentiment index rose to 67.8 in a preliminary August reading, up from 66.4 in the prior month, marking its first gain after four months of declines.
